

In the woods below our homes, sex workers sleep on old mattresses, tired from hard nights, they lie all day beneath tarpaulins strung between the trees, passing dog walkers wish they'd move on, but sometimes feel a common cause.

The workers,
Too tired to return
Their stares and smiles,
Turn back to sleep.